'Tis a lesson you should heed --

Try again;

If at first you don't succeed,

Try again.

Ans Reference:

The above stanza has been taken from the poem "Try Again" by W.E. Hickson.

Context:

In this poem, the poet says if at first you don't succeed, try again. Make at least three tries to be successful. Failure is a good lesson for you to learn how to succeed. Don't give up too easily, persistence pays off in the end.

Explanation:

The poet advises us to learn, understand and practise the rule of trying again. He says that if at first you don't succeed, try again. Failure is a good teacher. Instead of quitting after you fail, you should keep on trying. A person who preserves and keeps on trying again and again becomes courageous. Allah helps him and he gets success. So, get rid of fear of failure or hurdles, keep on trying till you succeed.

Our team won the toss and began to bat at 10 a.m. Our seven players were out for 80 runs. Then the captain of our team went in for batting. He was out for 2 runs only. In short, our team was out for 134 runs.

It was now the turn of the rival team which seemed to be very strong. Some of the players of the rival team were famous batsmen. The game again started. The fielding of our team was praised by all but our bowlers were a bit weak at the same time. One of its players named Javed impressed the spectators with his stroke play. It was he who shattered our bowlers' attack and made his first century in this match. Javed attempted other four runs to win the match. The opponent team scored 135 runs.

(c) My Favourite Book

There are hundreds of books in the market. They are written for everyone. Some books are meant for only children while the others are for grown-ups. I read many general books but I like Bang-i-Dara most of all. It is a collection of Urdu poems written by Allama Iqbal. I read many of its poems in my first reading. Many poems are interesting and well-worded. The first interesting poem is about Himalayas. This book contains beautiful and great poems. Some poems are about great men like Hazrat Bilal (رضي الله عنه), Ghalib, Sir Sayyid, Fatima bint-e-Abdullah and Sir Fazal Hussain. Some poems relate the beauties of the nature. Some poems discuss the conditions of Indo-Pak. Some poems describe the miserable conditions of the Muslim, and persuade them to improve their lot like ancestors. It has many long poems like Shikwa, Jawab-e-Shikwa, Khazr-e-Rah, Talu-e-Islam. These poems are full of lessons for the Muslims. They remind us to love Islam and be united to safeguard their rights. Iqbal wanted Pan-Islamism.

The poems persuade us to give up idle life and work in the living present to enjoy a bright future. Allama Iqbal wanted to see us free, strong and prosperous. It is indeed a great book which has lessons for children and adults alike. I love this book and study it when I have spare time. It has fired in me a love for Islam and the Holy Prophet (ﷺ). I always keep it under my pillow to enjoy it any time. It is my favourite book which is read and loved most of all leaving alone the Holy Quran.

The flames were rising to the sky. It was a sorry sight. After one hour, the fire brigade arrived. It fought the fire bravely. The fire was brought under control in an hour. There was no loss of life. But the house was badly damaged. The people who had gathered there left the spot when the fire was put out. Some neighbours came to the afflicted family for sympathy and help. They thanked for this offer. Some men brought food and eatables for them. One should be careful to avoid such accident. The careless attitude of owners was the cause of this fire. May God save us from such harms and incidents!
